Celle Chairs.

Durable design, ergonomics, unique appearance.

The Celle chair looks different from other work chairs because it is different. It's the only chair that has Cellular Suspension™, a durable system of cells and loops that properly distributes weight. Cellular Suspension also lets air pass through, another factor in the all-day comfort that Celle provides.

An idea takes off.

When Jerome Caruso imagined Celle, he envisioned something brand new—intelligently pliable seat and back surfaces that know how to respond properly when you sit down, work, and move. Caruso patented his innovation and named it Cellular Suspension™ because the surface is composed of small pads, which he called cells. He connected the cells with springy loops. Caruso likens the suspension's effect to buoyancy. Water supports you as you float, forming and reforming as you move.

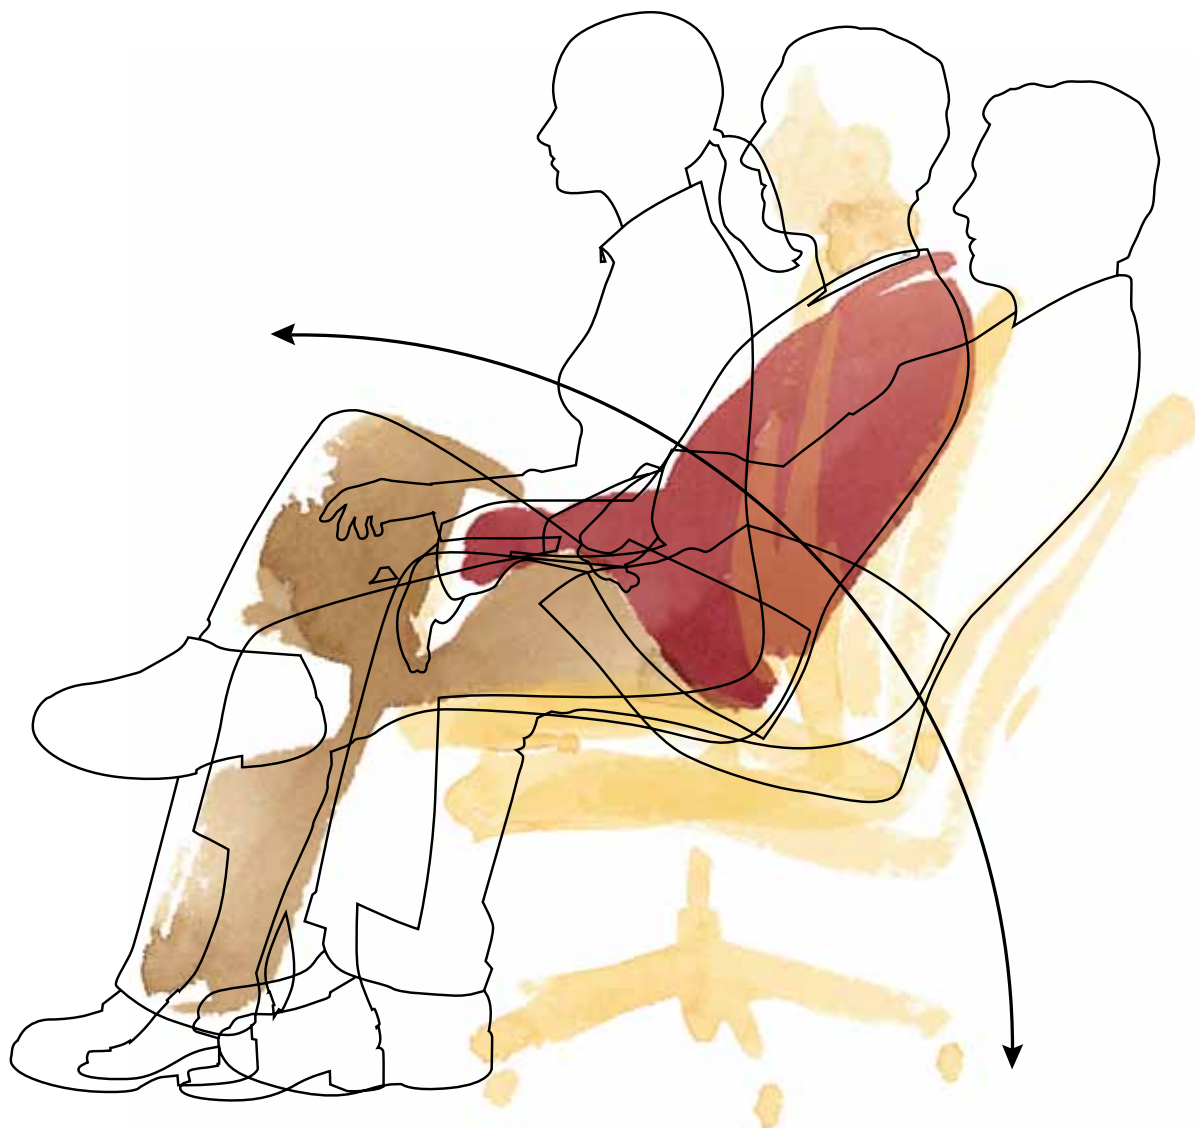

Targeted flex.

By varying the loop depths, we engineered different levels of flex throughout the seating surface. That let us target different areas of a person's body with the right amount of give. And no two of Celle's 1,578 cells are alike. Each is contoured to follow the chair's healthful curves, including a passive PostureFit, for exceptional lower-back support. This was accomplished with the simplest of materials: Polypropylene.

Comfort in motion.

To complement the natural support of the Cellular Suspension, Celle incorporates Herman Miller's patented Harmonic™ tilt. The synchronous, calibrated mechanism lets you move naturally through the chair's wide, 28-degree recline range. Without effort, you stay balanced and feel in control.

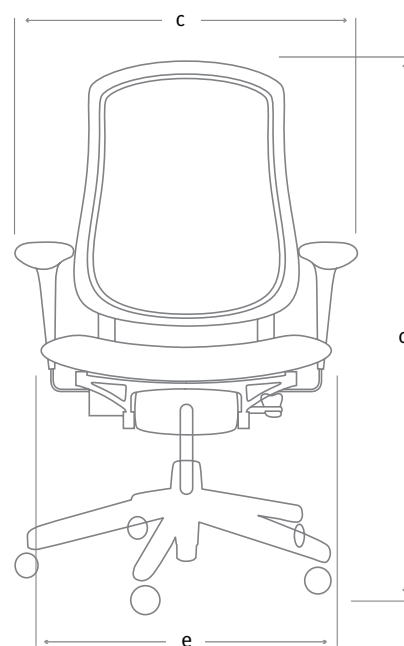

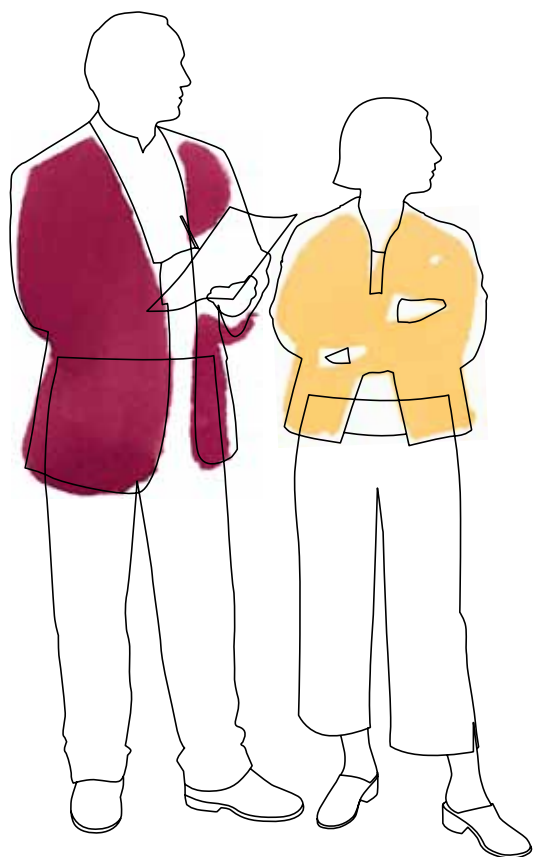

Celle fully upholstered

The Celle fully upholstered chair features a foam cushion seat for added comfort.

For people everywhere.

Celle offers a wealth of adjustments with generous ranges: pneumatic seat height, tilt tension, lumbar support, seat depth, arm height / width / pivot, tilt limiter and forward seat angle.
